Italy

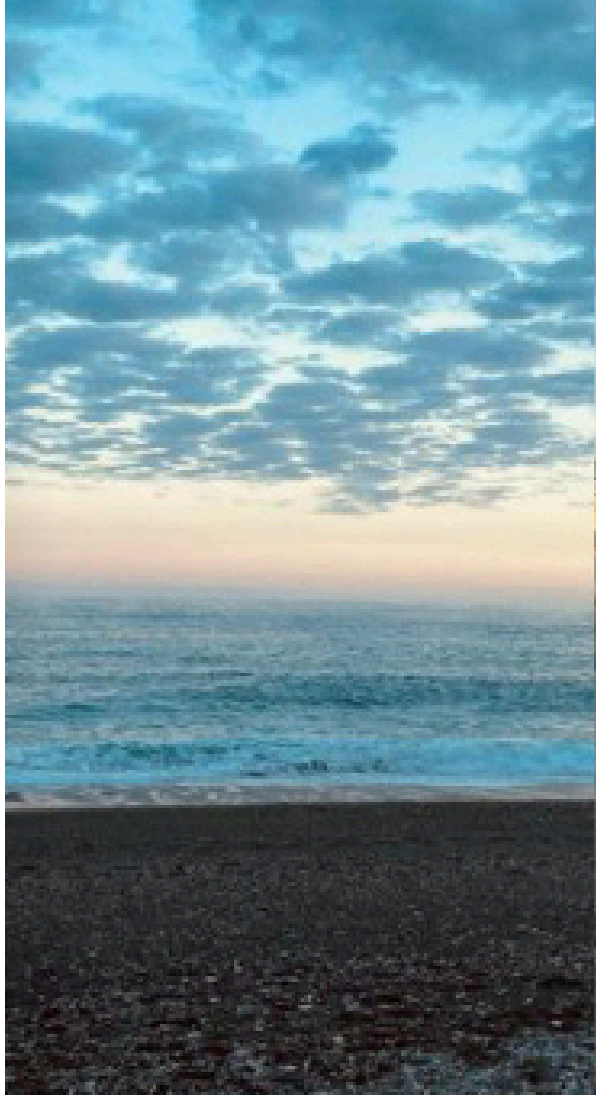

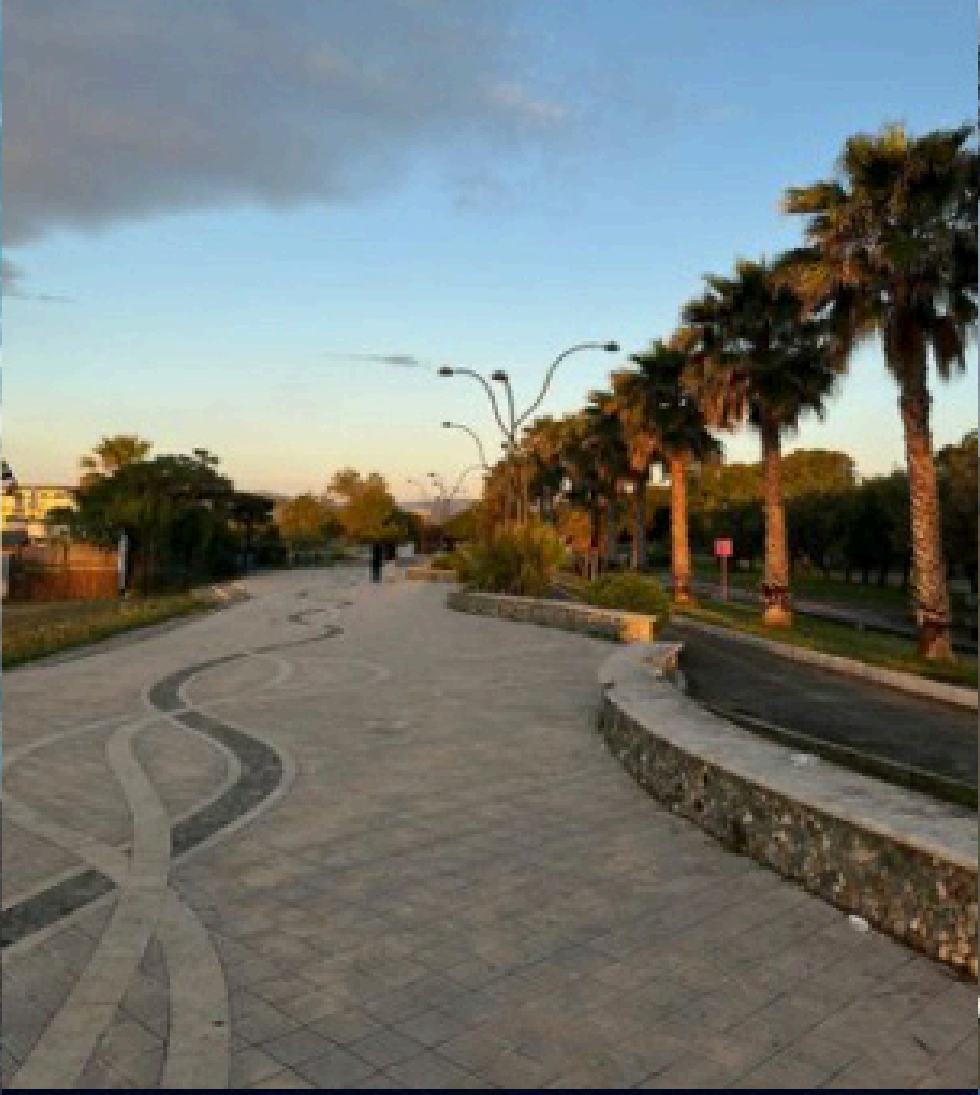

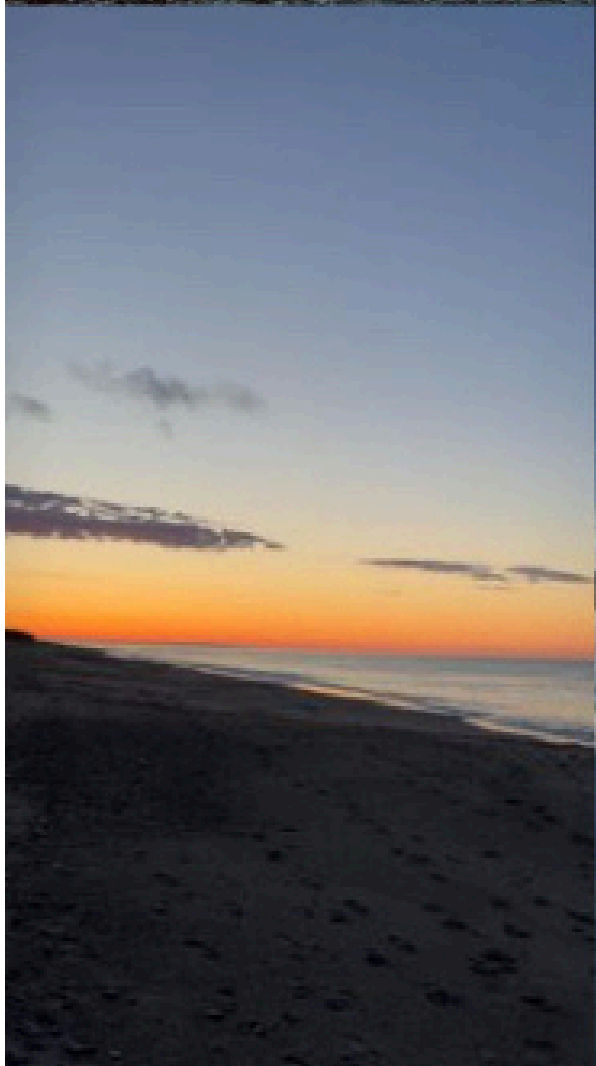

To me, Catanzaro Lido is not just a part of an Italian city, but a unique atmosphere — a way of life. The calmness of the seaside, the colors of the sunsets, and the kindness of the locals create a feeling that's hard to describe with words.

I was truly captivated by the cultural world of the city. You can feel the traditional and passionate soul of Southern Italy — through its music, cuisine, and the open-hearted nature of its people, it's clear that they truly know how to enjoy life. Religious traditions and celebrations are deeply rooted in everyday life, which I observed with admiration. The cultural diversity reflected in local crafts, restaurants, and small community events is genuinely impressive.

What I love most is how modern life and tradition don't clash here — they coexist in harmony. Both young and older generations take pride in their heritage, and that pride clearly shapes the identity of the community.

For me, the culture of Catanzaro Lido is not only interesting, but also deeply inspiring — a reminder that true beauty lies in simplicity, human connection, and the little moments of life.

During our stay, we spent relaxing days at the beach, visited a local museum filled with history, wandered through charming old towns, and had the chance to taste authentic traditional Italian cuisine.

During my week in Hungary, I learned a lot about their habits and their different way of living. They have different schedules, a school system that's organized differently, and a generally calmer lifestyle. Living with a Hungarian family made me understand the importance of hospitality and the value of small everyday things. Even in Budapest, through art and history, I saw how much they care about their culture. This experience opened my mind and made me truly appreciate cultural differences.

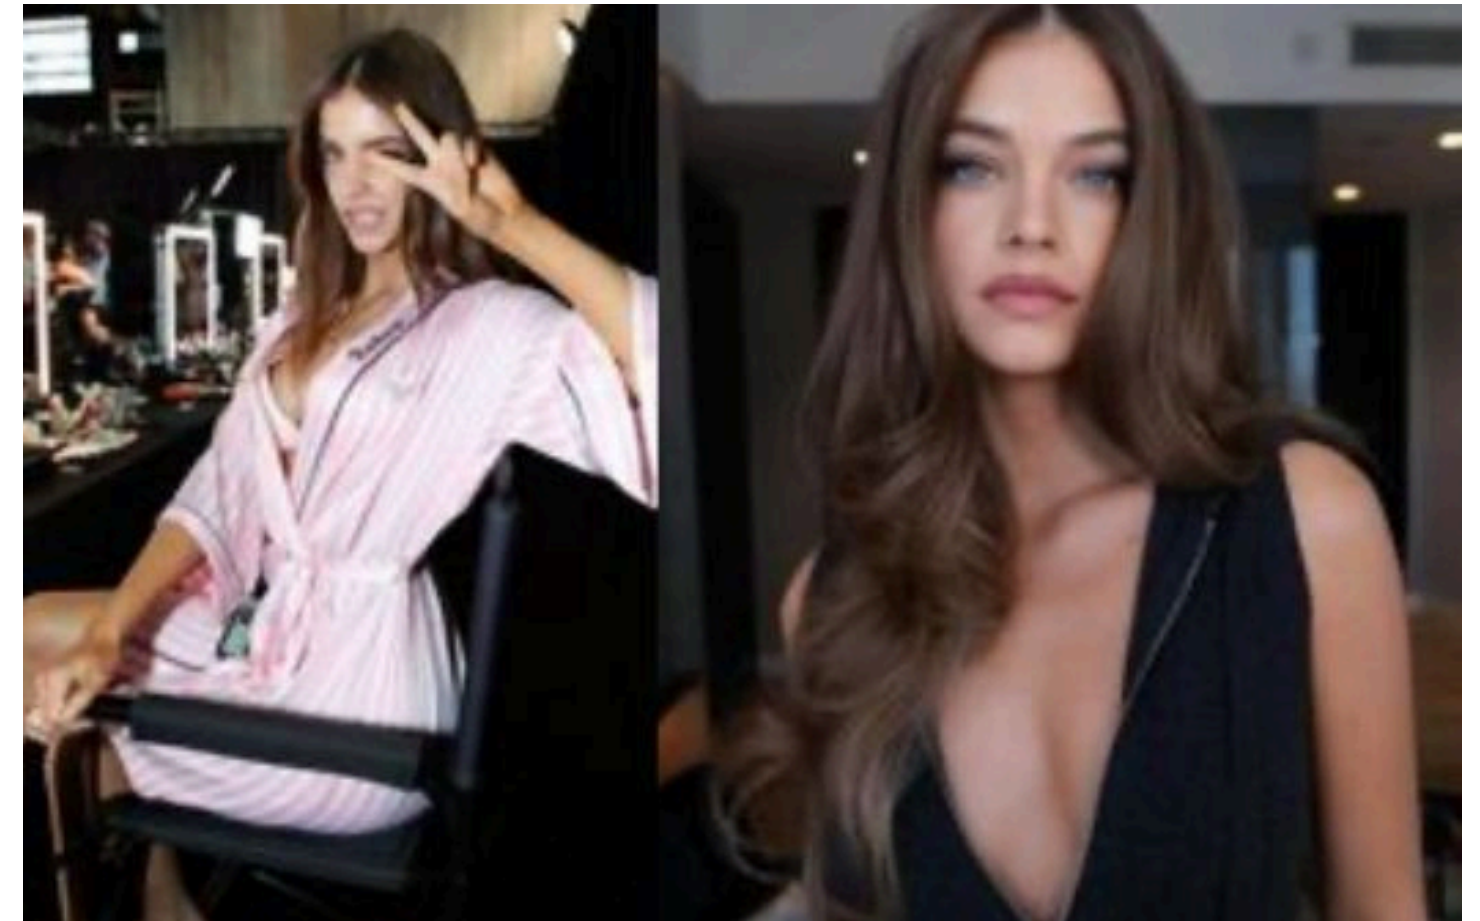

Hungary ♥

Barbara Palvin is one of the most internationally renowned Hungarian models. Born in Budapest in 1993, she began her modeling career at the age of 13 after being discovered on the street. She has worked with prestigious brands such as Armani, Chanel, L'Oréal, and Victoria's Secret, becoming the first Hungarian to be named a Victoria's Secret Angel in 2019.

Beyond her success in fashion, she is admired for her authenticity, down-to-earth personality, and pride in her Hungarian roots, which she frequently promotes in the media. She has appeared in top magazines like Vogue, Elle, and Harper's Bazaar, and made her acting debut in the 2014 film Hercules. Barbara is a powerful example of how global fame can go hand in hand with cultural pride, inspiring young people interested in fashion, media, and cultural exchange.

Checco Zalone – His Acting Style in Italian Comedy Cinema

Checco Zalone, stage name of Luca Medici, is an Italian actor known for his central role in contemporary comedy. His acting style is characterized by spontaneous humor, often portraying naïve, provincial characters full of contradictions, which humorously reflect aspects of Italian society.

In his films, Zalone often plays himself or variations of a recurring character: an average man who finds himself in absurd or paradoxical situations. His performance relies heavily on facial expressions, comic timing, and simple yet effective dialogue, often accompanied by musical moments.

Movies like Cado dalle nubi, Che bella giornata, Sole a catinelle, Quo vado?, and Tolo Tolo showcase a style of acting that balances popular humor with social satire.

While not a traditional actor, Zalone has developed a unique and recognizable cinematic language that has achieved great commercial success.
